ARE NOW IN PURSUIT OF THIS MURDERER.

SHOT A PROMINENT YOUNG GIRL IN CHURCH.

WHILE HYMN WAS BEING SUNG.

Millard Lee of Atlanta Drew a Pistol and Killed Miss Suttles Who Sat Near Him.

Atlanta, Ga., May 26.—Miss Lilla Suttles, 18, was twice shot and almost instantly killed by Millard Lee, 25, Sunday. Both are of the most prominent families in this section. Lee was seated in the church directly behind his intended victim. During the services he leaned over and spoke to her, seeking to make an engagement for the evening service. Lee was heard to say to her that he would kill her if she did not accompany him. The last hymn was being sung when Lee drew a revolver from his pocket and fired twice. Both bullets struck Miss Suttles and she died almost instantly. Lee escaped but a number of men are in pursuit with bloodhounds, and he may be lynched if caught.

NO MEAT

For Chicagoans as the Teamsters Employed by Packers Go Out on a Strike.

Chicago, May 26.—All of the 500 teamsters employed by the meat packers struck today and Chicago faces the prospect of going meatless. The big hotels and restaurants today notified patrons at breakfast that hams and other meat would be served only in limited quantities. Later in the day some of the meats were cut out of the bills of fare. When early deliveries were made, drivers who had not then gone out, announced that probably there would be no delivery tomorrow. Increased pay and decreased number of hours are demanded by the strikers.

VOLCANO

In Wisconsin Throwing Hot Stones and Causing Many to Flee in Terror.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 26.—Reports reached Milwaukee last night from Eagle River, Wis., Florence, Wis., and Iron Mountain, Mich., of the startling behavior of Thunder Mountain, the highest point of land in Northern Wisconsin, which is reported to be belching out smoke at an alarming rate. It is known that at Green Bay, 60 miles away, a red hot boulder fell on a street corner and was still red hot when morning came. The light of the mountain, it is said, can be seen for miles. The reports come from localities 70 miles apart.

According to the reports the home-steaders are hurrying to the settlements in alarm. The strange actions of the mountain have caused a panic in the two surrounding counties.

Thunder Mountain is more of a plateau than a hill, and in the center of the mountain is a great peat-bog and swamp. The mountain has been a solid mass of rock, with a vegetation at the top, and with only a cedar swamp surrounding it. State geological authorities have declared it to be of volcanic origin.

According to the report over 100 settlers have reached Eagle River. Fiery red sunsets and a succession of severe thunderstorms near the mountain added to the general consternation.

MURDER

Charge Will Probably be Made Against Mrs. Piexotto Who Has Made Some Admissions.

Columbus, O., May 26.—Mrs. Mary Piexotto who was arrested Saturday, as announced in the Advocate on suspicion of having killed the infant child of Louise Hiles of Loveland, near Cincinnati, is held at the police station. A charge probably of murder, will be filed against her today. Meanwhile the police officials will make a thorough examination of the premises surrounding the maternity hospital, of which she was proprietress, in the hope of unearthing the corpses of several more children.

Mrs. Piexotto admitted to the police that several new born babes had been in her house and that she had disposed of their bodies without having notified the health officials. She said that she sometimes burned the corpses, but usually she threw them into the river. She preferred the latter mode of disposing of them.

Her house and grounds surrounding are under the guard of policemen until the officers have finished a thorough excavation.

NEW ELDORADO

PROSPECTORS ON THEIR WAY TO THE GOLD FIELDS

In Thunder Mountain, Idaho—Rich Gold Strikes—Travel at Night is Necessary.

Salt Lake City, Utah, May 26.—Five thousand men are struggling over snow 20 feet deep in an effort to reach Thunder Mountain, Idaho, the new El Dorado that promises to eclipse the gold fields of Cripple Creek and the Klondike. Word from Salmon City today says the trails into the mountains are lined with prospectors.

All travel must be done by night. In the day time the sun melts the top of the snow and the prospectors must wait until night when the crust hardens. Returning prospectors bring wonderful stories. The gold fields embrace an area 40 miles square and a ledge 60 feet in height is said to contain gold so pure that the yellow metal is easily discernible to the naked eye. Samples are brought out of Thunder Mountain which assay from $500 to $50,000 a ton and gold nuggets of almost pure gold have been shown.

A courier from the mountain says that there is a shortage of provisions. Flour is bringing $40 a sack, meal $20 a sack, bacon $5 a pound, small cans of baking powder $2, and beans $5 a pound, potatoes $1 a pound, coffee $6 a pound and other provisions in proportion. Twenty-five thousand prospectors are expected by June 1, when the snow will be melted.

FORTY-NINE BODIES.
Fernie, B. C., May 26.—Forty-nine bodies have been taken out of the wrecked No. 2 mine. The work of recovery has been temporarily suspended in order to make the mine safe.

FISSURE

THREE HUNDRED YARDS WIDE FROM PEAK TO BASE.

SPLITS MONT PELEE, AND NORTH END OF THE ISLAND.

MAY DROP INTO THE OCEAN.

Second Outbreak of Volcano Evidently Destroyed Looters at Work. Inhabitants Leaving.

Fort de France, Martinique, May 26.—The government dredge went to St. Pierre Saturday and the crew burned 130 bodies, including many of those killed by last Tuesday's eruption of Mont Pelee, who were evidently engaged in looting.

The workmen report that Mont Pelee is split from peak to base, and that there is a fissure 300 yards wide. It is unofficially reported that the various governments will be advised to discontinue sending supplies, as the enormous quantity now here is sufficient for the greatest emergency. The financial condition of the people, however, is bad.

Admiral Servan, who just arrived here on the French cruiser Tage from New Orleans, has cast a new fear into the thousands of panic stricken refugees in this city, and as a result the clamor is greater than ever today. The Tage made a careful inspection of the entire island on her way here.

Admiral Servan as a result of this, declares that he fears the entire north end of the island may drop into the sea at any moment.

He suggests that a trocha be established directly across the island to keep the inhabitants out of the dangerous district. It is his idea to build at once a new city of St. Pierre on the east coast of the island out of the fire zone of Mont Pelee and away from the north end of the island.

Admiral Servan in support of his theory, points out the fact that the cable broke the day before St. Pierre was destroyed. This he says, proves that the bottom of the sea is dropping, perhaps letting water into the molten interior of the volcano.

Despite the work of the special commission, composed of 15 leading citizens, headed by Mayor Victor Severe, of this city, which has been seeking to check the widespread alarm and subdue the panic, 300 more families have left here in the last 24 hours. All of these are going to the island of Guadeloupe.

Only the wealthy, who were able to pay high prices for passage, were taken. Thousands of poor refugees prayed, stormed and pleaded in vain to be allowed to board the steamers. The strain to which these poor, helpless refugees are constantly exposed is driving many of them to despair, and even insanity. Seven thousand of them, destitute and hungry, are being sheltered, clothed and fed under direction of the government authorities.

Washington, May 26.—The Navy department received the following dispatch from Commander Berry of the Dixie, this morning:

St. Lucia, May 26.—Dixie discharged remainder stores at Kingston, where most needed. Provisions now on hand for several months. Lumber for houses needed. Volcano active. No additional damage. Care of refugees and injured approximately 8,000 well in hand by local authorities. (Signed) "BERRY."

Fort de France, May 26.—Two slight earthquake shocks were felt here Sunday afternoon. The alarm of the natives is greatly increased.

H. H. SMITH.

Fort de France, May 26.—Yesterday I tried to reach the crater of Mt. Pelee from the north. It was a trip fraught with danger, for no man knew when death might gather him in. I traveled with Robert F. Hill, the United States Government geologist. We made the trip on a coasting vessel, and were driven back. There was rumbling, followed by a mud eruption, which swept Precheur on the north coast and forced us to hasten from that place.

At Precheur we discovered seven frightened, desperate persons, who had been unable to get away in time to avoid the mud shower, and we rescued them. They were almost crazed with fear.

Close to St. Pierre many small craters can be seen spouting steam. The place is one vast ruin, a grave yard from which every species of life departed.

There is one big mud geyser in action on the slope of Pelee. It is thought that the many vents in the volcano prevent disastrous eruptions. Pelee has been spouting smoke and ashes heavily today. Ashes fell today at Fort Abelle, 12 miles away.

H. H. SMITH.

Paris, May 26.—The Minister of Commerce today cabled the governor of Martinique to facilitate by all means in his power the emigration of inhabitants of the island wishing to leave. The governor of Guadeloupe and Guiana have been supplied with funds to defray the expense of receiving refugees.

GIGANTE DEAD

Dying Murderer Told Nurse to "Go Way Back and Sit Down."—His Last Words.

Canton, O., May 26.—Chas. Gigante, who shot and killed George Jacob in the attempt to escape from the Canton Workhouse, on Wednesday morning, and was himself wounded, died Sunday.

The nurse attending Guard Stone, who was wounded by him, went to Gigante's bedside to administer some medicine. She gave the murderer a hypodermic injection of morphine to ease his pain. In trying to repeat the treatment Gigante objected and told her to "Go way back and sit down."

The post-mortem examination showed that two bullets had entered his body, and his statement that he had shot himself was verified. His mother will take the remains.

The prisoner's remark to the nurse were the last words that he uttered.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Washington, May 26.—It is today reported that the conferees on the river and harbor bill have reached an agreement and that the bill will be reported to the Senate and House today. As passed by the House, the bill carried $60,000,000, but the Senate increased that amount to $70,000,000. It is stated the conferees have compromised on $65,000,000.

Mrs. Mabrey bruised.
Two children of Mrs. Mabrey, slightly injured.

The main storm came from the north. It seems there was also one from the southwest and that they met in this vicinity. The storm from the north was preceded by a heavy rain and what appeared to be a dark mass of clouds about 100 yards wide, which traveled with great speed. One wing of the storm passed along Main street and blew in several store fronts, doing much damage to stocks.

Knitting Mill Hill, south of the town caught the full force of the tornado which blew down the school house, and two residences there, converting them literally into kindling wood. The occupants ran from one of the houses when it went to pieces.

FATHER

AND BROTHER OF THE MURDERED MAN ASSISTED IN WORK OF LYNCHING WHITE CAMP SUNDAY.

NEGRO CONFESSED HIS GUILT.

Mob Broke Into Jail at Paris, Mo., and Hanged the Murderer Quickly and Quietly.

Paris, Mo., May 26.—Abe Withcrup the murderer of William Grow, who was killed last month, was taken from the Paris jail Sunday morning, marched to the bridge on the north edge of town and hanged by a mob of more than 100 men, who rode quietly into town at midnight.

The mob went at once to the jail, but were held back for more than an hour by Sheriff Clark and Deputies Martin Clark and Polk Masterson, who stood before the entrance to the jail stockade with drawn revolvers and threatened to shoot the first man who attempted to force an entrance. The mob remained in front of the jail for nearly two hours parleying with the officers and finally marched away.

The officers remained on guard, but believed that the mob had disbanded. About 2 o'clock several men approached and engaged the Sheriff and his deputies in conversation. Then suddenly, before the officers could defend themselves, they were seized, disarmed and carried away. The mob then quickly reappeared, surrounded the jail again, and with sledge hammers battered down the big iron doors. This was the work of but a few minutes. James H. Whitecotton, state representative, rushed into the jail as soon as the door gave way, and made a stirring appeal to the mob to desist and allow the law to take its course. The leaders wavered for a moment and became quiet, and would probably have spared the prisoner's life but for the cries for vengeance set up by those in the rear. Mr. Whitecotton was swept aside and in a few minutes the negro was secured.

Withcrup made no resistance and confessed his guilt. The father and brother of the victim were in the mob and assisted in escorting the man to the bridge, a quarter of a mile away. At the bridge Withcrup's feet were tied by the brother of the murdered man, while the senior Grow adjusted the rope about his neck and pushed him off the structure. Withcrup's neck was broken by the fall. His death was almost instantaneous. Their work being done the mob left the body hanging to the bridge and dispersed quickly and quietly.

John Sherman's Will.

Mansfield, Ohio, May 26.—The will of the late John Sherman has been taken up in common pleas court to have a construction made on the matter of the disposal of certain personal property. Property amounting to $30,000 was willed to Mrs. Sherman several years prior to Mr. Sherman's death. The question now is whether the property goes to an adopted daughter as the only direct heir or to the nephews and nieces. Mrs. Mary Sherman McCallum, now in Switzerland, is the adopted daughter and she is making a fight for the money.

MOMENTOUS TRUTH.

There is truth at the highest importance to the American people conveyed both by implication and by direct statement in the following passage from Senator Tamm's speech on the Philippine question:

Was it ever heard before that a civilized humane and Christian nation made war upon a people and refused to tell them what they wanted of them? You refuse to tell these people this year or next year or perhaps for twenty years whether you mean in the end to deprive them of their independence or no. You say you want them to submit. To submit to what? To more military force? But for what purpose or what end is this military force to be exerted? You decline to tell them. Not only you decline to say what you want of them, except here and there, but you will not even let them tell you what they ask of you.

From the very first there has either been absolute silence or only the most obscure and ambiguous deliveries by the representatives of the party in power both in the White House and in Congress as to their ultimate purposes with respect to the people of the Philippine islands.

The only clear deliverance has been a demand for unconditional surrender backed by force not unattended with cruelty. Not even the deliverances of the supreme court have illuminated the prospect either for the Philippines or for the American people.

Every official voice, civil and military, has been silenced save for the vaguest of Delphic utterances. There has been no intimation of a purpose near or remote, to accord to the Philippines American liberty. There has been no expressed intention to grant them political liberty—self-government with constitutional guarantees—such as we enjoy and such as we have always extended to the people of territories we have heretofore acquired.

On the contrary, every act, civil and military, formal and informal, from the creation of an extra-constitutional commission to the common application of contemptuous and opprobrious epithets to the people from the decision of the Supreme Court that Congress may make one tariff law for the United States and another for the Philippines to the employment of military expeditions condemned by our own articles of war as well as by the law of nations, has declared by the plainest implication that it was the intention of the dominant party to treat the people of the islands as conquered subjects possessing only such rights and privileges as the conqueror may be graciously pleased to accord.

The policy of imperious demand and obstinate silence as to the ultimate intentions—silence save as actions have implied an intention to treat the conquered people as the Americans have never before treated any people—has been directly calculated to implant deadly and undying hatred in the breasts of the Philippines.

What is even worse, it has been directly calculated to discredit the American people as the professed friends of all men and the champions of free government and liberty regulated by law.

We need for the good of the people of the Philippines, and even more for the good of the people of the United States, a Congress which will declare plainly and unequivocally that we intend American liberty, American free government, under the guaranty of our common constitution, as much for the people of the Philippines as we did for the people of the Northwest territory when it was confirmed to them by the ordinance of 1787 and the national constitution.

We need a President whose utterances will bring hope and not despair. We can have neither such a Congress nor such a President so long as the Republican party as now led in it.

COOL, CALM BOWSER

LECTURES WIFE ON THE EVIL OF LOSING PRESENCE OF MIND.

He Tells Her What to Do When In Peril—After Pitying the Indecision of Women He Goes to Bed and Meets His Waterloo.

(Copyright, 1902, by C. R. Lewis.)

"HERE is a case," began Mr. Bowser the other evening as he laid aside his newspaper. "There is a case where a woman in Chicago lost her life by becoming confused on the street and being struck by a carriage. Forty-nine out of every fifty accidents occur through people losing their heads at a critical moment. You have been very lucky thus far in escaping accidents, but I feel it my duty nevertheless to advise with you. It is through no fault of your own that you haven't been smashed up a dozen times over."

A GREAT BIG LOAFER ON A BIRD STUPOR ME.

stant she is menaced by a danger. It wouldn't have surprised me any day in the last ten years to have heard that you were run over on the street. You are just careless enough to walk in front of a trolley car."

"How about your being careless enough to walk in front of a butcher cart?" she asked.

"I never did it. The cart turned a corner on me."

"But you stepped off a car and was hit by a peddler's wagon."

"Never! I was crowded off a car, but the accident was no fault of mine."

"Didn't you run for a car to be knocked down by a bicycle?"

"Never! I was sauntering toward a car when a great big loafer on a bike wobbled around and struck out. Never have I had an accident through my own fault, while my coolness and calmness have prevented hundreds through the fault of others. If I went blundering up and down as you do, trusting to bullhead luck, I'd be killed inside of a week. When you take a car, do you ever think that a runaway team may jump over the front dashboard?"

HE RUSHED DOWNSTAIRS YELLING "FIRE"

"I don't think I ever do," she admitted.

"Just like a woman, and yet such a thing is quite likely to happen and to cause the death of six or eight people in the front end of a car—never. Suppose you were walking along and the cry of 'Mad dog' was raised, what would you do?"

"I should probably look around for the dog."

"Not a doubt of it, and thereby fall a victim to the brute. Should you ever hear that cry, you must dash for the nearest doorway at once. Bear this in mind whenever you are out, so as not to be taken by surprise. There is such a thing as the machinery of a trolley car becoming disabled and the car running away. In such a case, were you a passenger, what would you do?"

"I'd call for the police."

"Very likely, and then run out and jump off and break your neck. The sensible way would be to shut your teeth, brace your feet and get a good grip with your hands, and if the car dashed into anything you'd escape injury. When you are passing along the walk, does it ever occur to you that buildings frequently collapse and kill half a dozen or more pedestrians?"

"I don't believe it does."

the buildings, Mrs. Bowser, and at the first signal of danger leap for the middle of the street."

"But you were passing a building a few weeks ago and a brickbat fell down on your head," she protested.

"Why didn't you leap for the middle of the street?"

"Because in my coolness I observed that it was only the fall of a single brick instead of a general collapse," he lamely replied.

"Then a single brick is nothing?"

"Don't take that too much to me, woman! I am trying to beat a little sense into your head, and you ought to see it. Suppose you were in a theater when the cry of fire was raised—there without me. What would you do?"

"I'd ask the person next to me where the fire was."

"Certainly, and then you'd want to know when his or her grandfather died, whether he or she had ever had measles or whooping cough, whether the fire was on the stage or in some factory a mile away, and I'd be lucky to recover your charred bones. Yes, you'd be sure to find around for ten or fifteen minutes instead of calmly rising up at the first alarm and coolly walking out. By George, but what an idiot a woman is!"

"I'm sorry," said Mrs. Bowser in contrite tones as Mr. Bowser got up and took a walk.

"We will suppose a few cases nearer home," he finally continued as he glared at the cat and fell into his chair. "You are sitting here alone, and you hear a sudden fall downstairs. You run down and find the cook senseless on the floor, with her eyes rolled back and all her limbs rigid. What do you do?"

"I telephone for the doctor."

"Yes; you monkey with the telephone for a quarter of an hour to find that the doctor is out, and when you return to the kitchen the soul of the cook has passed away. Had you placed the dishpan under her head and dashed water into her face she would have been up and at work in ten minutes."

Mr. Bowser had a good deal more to say about coolness and calmness and presence of mind, and Mrs. Bowser had had the tact to let him do his boasting undisputed, and when bedtime came he was so well pleased with himself that he admitted she might almost cross the street without being knocked down by a car or blown up by dynamite. He didn't see the cat wink at herself or he might have suspected that a stone was being prepared for him to stub his toe against. He had been asleep for an hour, and the only noise to disturb the night were the yowls of a cat in the back yard looking for a scrap when Mrs. Bowser shook him by the shoulder and softly said:

"I am not in the least excited, and of course you won't be, but I thought it best to tell you that I smell smoke."

"By thunder, so do I!" he exclaimed as he sat up in bed and sniffed and sniffed.

"We will be calm—very calm," she continued. "It may be that the whole

A NORTHWEST PORT.

Seattle, in the Beautiful State of Washington.

(Special Correspondence.)
Seattle, May 21.—Dispatches in the newspapers announce that steamers sailing from eastern United States ports to Europe are crowded well nigh to the point where passengers must sleep up in the lifeboats.

Those Americans who have never been in this glorious northwest know not what they miss, of grandeur of scenery and of a life the like of which can be found nowhere else on the globe. I sit here in the window of my room in a small hotel overlooking Puget sound. Off to my right northward are the mountains of the Olympic range, snowcapped and glittering like the domes of the Celestial City winter and summer. To the left, sixty miles away, rises Mount Rainier, dazzling white, in clear weather distinctly visible.

Since the Alaskan gold discoveries the population of Seattle has doubled. It will always be one of the great ports of departure to and from our newest and final northwest, Alaska, whose riches as yet no mind but that of the Infinite knows. With untold wealth of

THE C. O. D. MAN'S WOES

MONEY HE EARNED GETS HIM INTO A HEAP OF TROUBLE.

He is Taken For a Millionaire. Escapes Too Much Attention and Subscribes to Improve a Village. He Suffers For It.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

"AM no kicker," said the C. O. D. man as he pecked the quarter extended to him and hitched along to make room on the park bench, "but when a dilapidated gentleman is driven too far he must turn and maintain his dignity. I was making a highway map of Wisconsin one summer when I ran across a village with a new town hall.

"There was some trouble with the painters, and I stepped in and handled

"A WIDOW RECOGNIZED ME."

a brush for fifteen days at $2 a day. I had tramped on for about thirty miles when a farmer who had had an old watch stolen from his vest hanging on a tree in a field had me arrested as the thief. I was rushed to the nearest village, asked a few questions by a justice of the peace and sent to the county jail for ninety days. In jail I was searched and the $30 found on me. This was grounds for 'suspicion,' and I was immediately haled before another justice, who tacked sixty days on to the original sentence and held my cash to await a claimant. I took a week to think things over and then got word to a village lawyer, and when we had consulted together the fun began.

"Our first move was to begin a suit for damages against the farmer who had charged me with theft, and we had him badly scared within twenty-four hours. Then we went for the constable for arresting me without a warrant. We followed this with charges against the justice, who had refused me counsel, and move No. 4 was against the sheriff for not supplying his prisoners with provisions demanded by law. One of the turnkeys of the jail had slammed me around because I had refused to saw wood, and we gave him a suit for assault and battery. A writ of habeas corpus took me out of jail, and the excitement in that county beat all the circuses for twenty years. If the lawyer hadn't been taken with typhoid fever and died, we might have eventually upset the whole state government, and I would have been sure of a place in a dime museum for life. But his death called a halt. After the funeral I was waited upon by a committee, and the result was that I took a night train out of town and never stopped for 200 miles. I took with me $250 in cash and the best wishes of a thriving community, and I suppose those suits have been dropped from the docket ever since. As I said, I am no kicker, but it's well to let people know that even a tramp has rights in law."

"And did you use your money to make a new start in life?" was asked as the story seemed to be ended.

"In a way I did," smiled the C. O. D. man, "but it only brought me fresh trouble. I struck a town I rather fancied, and I bought me some clothes, engaged a front room at the inn and settled down to take a few baths at the mineral springs for my rheumatism. I hadn't put in over three days when the story got around that I was a multi-millionaire taking a quiet lay off, and individuals and committees began to call. The subscriptions I was asked to put down for churches, mill dams, railroads, schoolhouses, asylums and so on footed up tens of thousands. I could have stood these off, but the band came to serenade me every night, social parties were given in my honor, and a widow with a good deal of push to her recognized me as her long looked for affinity at first sight. She was a firm believer in the theory that matches are made in heaven, and she figured it out to a dot that the angels had killed off her husband and brought me around through the swamps and underbrush that I might take his place. I never was any good at arguing against a widow, and so I solved the matter by taking a skip. It was a mysterious disappearance on my part, and I heard afterward that they dragged the river and hunted through the swamps for my body and that the widow put on rubber boots and was foremost in the search.

"I had a few dollars of the money left, and I was not happy. Raw turnips don't taste good to a man who is financially able to buy roast beef and fried chicken, and it didn't seem to be quite the fair thing by other dilapidated gentlemen. While in this state of mind I struck a village which had six mudholes on its half mile of main street. There were wagons stuck in three of these holes as I jogged into town, and the others were occupied by stray hogs. I asked for the president of the village, who was a grocer, and when I reached his store I asked:

"How long have you lived in this town?"

"Forty five years," he replied.

"How old are these six mudholes on there?"

"Well, I used to paddle around in 'em forty years ago."

"And hasn't the town ever made any move to fill 'em up?"

"It never has. No, them six mudholes have grown up with us and shared our joys and our sorrows, and I suppose they will continue on for another half century."

"But they must be a big nuisance," says I.

"They surely are."

"How much would it cost to fill them up with gravel?"

"Just exactly $14. I've figured it out a thousand times."

"And won't the town vote the money?"

"Never in this world."

"Would it object to my doing it?"

"I don't think so; but what's your object?"

"Just to get rid of them. Here's the money, and I'm going to hang around and see the work done."

"Well, it was done," said the C. O. D. man, "but I got into trouble over it. When these holes had been filled up there was no longer any place for the stray hogs to wallow in, and that made all the hog owners mad. There was no longer any excitement over teams getting stuck, and that hurt the feelings of others. A third party couldn't understand why a tramp should take it upon himself to do such a piece of work, and it was finally decided that I was either a lunatic or a suspicious character. They run me into the engine house, and two doctors and a committee of citizens took me in hand. The doctors probed for evidences of lunacy, and when they had finished they differed in their reports. One of them reported:

"He talks as sane as any man I ever heard of, and may simply be a case of hereditary version to mudholes."

"The report of the other was:

"I don't like his talk. He uses more or less Latin, and when asked what lunatic asylum he escaped from a cunning expression came to his eyes. He may not be dangerous, but it would be as well to keep an eye on him."

"The committee of townsmen fired questions at me for three straight hours," said the dilapidated, "and it ended by their solemnly shaking their heads and declaring that a tramp who had $14 to pay for filling up six mudholes in a strange town must be planning the murder of at least a dozen citizens. I was shoved into the lockup over night, and next morning a constable led me forth by the arm and saw me a mile or so on my way toward the next town. As we walked up the street I saw that all the gravel had been thrown out of those mudholes during the night and that the glad hogs had returned to their wallows. There are some things in this world you can't beat, and one of 'em is a pastoral village with hogs and mudholes picturesquely scattered about."

LIFTING A MORTGAGE

"How did we pay the mortgage on the church? Waal, stranger, yer goin' to leave town in the mornin' for the States, ain't yer? Yer won't blab a word of what I tell yer, will yer? Yer looks like a squar' man, stranger, an' I guess I can trust yer. Yer see, in the first place, stranger, our preacher was a cl'ar grit to the backbone. He had a mighty hard time to convert us sinners. Why, we used to go up to the old church, play poker, drink an' cut up generally while he was exhortin' us, but he was a cl'ar grit, stranger, an' as soon as he seed that arguin' with us wouldn't convert us, but we went on playin' poker an' got wuss an' wuss, he jest fixed up for war one meetin' in night an' came ready for business. Instead of openin' the meetin' with pra'r, as usual, the first thing he did was to whip out a six shooter an' blaze away at Three Fingers Jack's bat, that was hung up on the wall opposite him, an' I'll be scalped if he didn't put those six pligs in a space that you could covey with a four bit piece on the crown of that hat.

Stranger, I'll be scalped if we didn't fine the church, every one on us, within six months arter that, and there's no more lawabidin' camp in the diggin's than we've got. Oh, yer, yer, wants to know about the mortgage liftin'. Waal, yer see, arter we'd got converted the preacher set to work to build a bigger an' better church buildin'. Now, our diggin's wasn't pannin' out very well, an' big nuggets were scarce, but we managed to chip in enough to start the new church. Lumber was so all fired dear an' buildin' stuff generally that we had to finally raise money by a mortgage, an' when the buildin' was done it was covered by a pretty steep blanket.

One Sunday the preacher took his text from the Bible on givin' an' finished up his sermon by sayin' that he expected a visit from the bishop next Sunday an' he would like to have the mortgage paid off at that service. He said he know'd we'd been very generous an' had done nobly, but if we made one more effort he know'd we could lift the mortgage. He apointed Big Jim, Dandy Dave an' myself a committee to raise the dust. Waal, arter the preacher had gone home we took up a collection, but when all our pockets were emptied there wasn't nearly enough to settle the debt. Big Jim spoke up an' said the dust wouldn't have to be raised, an' he called for volunteers. We all wanted to fine with him, but he picked out eight of the best men of us an' said to meet him, masked, armed an' mounted, ready for business, in the woods back of the church. Tuesday night at 10 o'clock. We were all there on time an' rode off over the hill in silence, no knowin' what was Big Jim's layout, but most of us could have made a pretty tolerable guess. Arter we'd rode lively for an hour Big Jim called a halt, tellin' us we had to rob the Pacific express that was due through the big cut at about 12 o'clock. He said we wasn't to shoot to kill, only to scare, an' gave each one of us our positions, two for the engineer an' fireman, three to make the passengers ante up an' the rest to do the shootin' in the air.

We tied our horses conveniently an' took our positions in the cut, Big Jim with a red lantern to stop the express. Now, we'd all been used to this kind of business before we'd got converted an' know'd jest what to do. The express came rumblin' along an' stopped as soon as she seed the red light. It was slich a surprise to the trainmen—they hadn't been robbed in a long time—that everything worked slick, an' there wasn't any shootin' back at us. The three men apointed to do the holdin' up went through the passengers, an' they all anted up mighty oblige' 'ceptin' one big, fleshy party with a bald head an' glasses. He asked if this was a civilized country an' said he'd have the sheriff arter us an' wanted to fight Big Jim, but a likely young lady that seemed to be his darter cooed him down an' made him come up with the dust. Arter we had made 'em all ante we left the train go. On countin' over the dust we found we had plenty to lift the mortgage. Next day when the robbery was made known we was the first to form a posse to hunt down the robbers, but they were never caught. Sunday we were all in our places in church early an' had put the stuff to settle the mortgage on the pulpit so the preacher would see it first thing before he commenced the service. We all wore billed shirts an' were dressed to kill.

What do you think, stranger? When the bishop put in appearance with the preacher we railroad committee found he was the same old, fat, bald party that we'd robbed on the express an' had made slich a fuss. The committee felt a bit shaky, but then we remembered that we'd worn masks, an' we kept our seats. The preacher introduced the bishop, an' the bishop spoke about how glad he was the church had been so prosperous an' was able to pay off the mortgage. He said it was more blessed to give than to receive, though he did make a strong kick when we robbed him. He said he'd a tough experience comin' in on the train. Told us about the robbery an' then said what a blessed thing it was Christians like we war, and we'd order make an effort to hunt out those thieves an' robbers, try an' civilize them an' bring them into the fold. He talked so all fired nice that we felt sorry that we'd robbed him. I guess it's all right, stranger, for his darter arterward married our preacher, an' she's the angel of the diggin's, a comfortin' of us an' a blessin' to the camp. Any-way, that's the way we lifted the mortgage. Don't blab about it, will yer, stranger? ROBERT D. COARD.

THIS AND THAT.

Saturday's Republican convention shows that nothing is so uncertain as a "dead sure thing." The anti-Ickes men had a majority of the delegates to the convention and they got up in the court house tower and announced the fact through a megaphone. Not content with this, they told how they intended to wipe up the earth with Postmaster Ickes just to show Mark Hanna and Joseph Benson Foraker how exceedingly unpopular was their appointment of Mr. Ickes for a third term as postmaster of Newark. The thing had been figured out and there could be no mistake. They had the "goods." The early stages of the convention showed that Ickes was beaten, but at the noon hour the Postmaster and his friends got in their work with the delegates and they transacted business so effectively that the whole Ickes slate went through with a whirl after dinner. The "antis" were amazed. They couldn't understand it. Here's a pointer. The next time you have the Postmaster downed keep still till the remains are in his political coffin, for J. M. I., you must understand, is something of a politician.

Governor Nash had a close call at the Republican primaries in Columbus Saturday night, but he was elected a delegate to the state convention which meets at Cleveland May 27, by a narrow margin.

They say that Senator Marconi didn't send a message of congratulation, wireless or otherwise, to Miss Holman on her wedding day last week.

Startling statistics on criminology have been presented at the annual convention of the New York county W. C. T. U. One of the delegates read a statement to the effect that a woman of criminal tendencies, whose name was not made public for obvious reasons died in 1897. "Her descendants have been traced," continued the speaker, "and they number 800, of whom 700 were criminals, having been convicted at last once. Thirty-seven were murderers and were executed for their crimes. This family has cost the nation $3,000,000 for trials and executions."

The Washington Post wants to know if "it would be deemed impertinent to make inquiry as to who is getting all this money the beef trust has been losing?" We can fancy a long line of people standing up to be searched.—Utica News-Herald.

Since the new game law places a limit of eighteen on the number of quail a hunter may bag in one day a limit of ten on squirrels, it is highly probable that there will be a dearth in the future of tales of Nimrods who shot more birds and squirrels than they were able to bring home. Here and there may be found a hunter who will admit that he has never yet exceeded the limit.

An Associated Press dispatch from London brings this unique story: A wealthy woman, named Silva, recently died at Lisbon and left her entire property to a rooster. She was a fervid spiritualist, a believer in the transmigration of souls, and imagined that the soul of her dead husband had entered the rooster. She caused a special fowl house to be built and ordered her servants to pay extra attention to their masters' wants. The disgust of her relatives over the will caused the story to become public and a lawsuit might have followed had not one of the heirs adopted the simple expedient of having the wealthy rooster killed, thus becoming himself the next of kin.

The Women of Damascus.
The women of Damascus—that is the Moslem women—are more closely veiled than those of Constantinople and other eastern cities because the people here are more tenacious in the observance of the ancient customs of their race and the requirements of their religion. The veils are thicker, also, and cover the entire face. Some of them are figured so that the concealment is even more complete.
Greeks, Jews and Armenians do not wear veils, and some of them are very handsome, particularly the Jewish women. Their eyes, complexion and hair are superb. The types of oriental loveliness that are to be seen in the bazaars of Constantinople and the streets of Jerusalem.

No women are employed about the hotels or restaurants. All the "domestic" work is done by men. In the shops and manufacturing places of Damascus thousands of women and girls are employed, but they are exclusively Greeks and Jews. No Moslem would permit his wife, daughter or sister to appear in a shop or any other place where men are employed.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Judge Shauck of the Supreme Court, a brother of Mr. M. Shauck, has a plan for a constitutional amendment that would go far toward preventing such legislative blunders as have been turned up in the few days that have elapsed since the legislature adjourned. His proposition is to provide a date upon which the legislature shall adjourn sine die, and another one for bidding the introduction of any bills after a date, say one month previous to the adjournment date. His notion is that the errors are due largely to hasty consideration of matters coming up when there is not time to give them the attention they require. The provisions proposed would prevent this or would at least give the legislature time to discover and correct any mistakes it may have made before it ends its session.

Truant Officer Hurt.

D. J. Jones, the Truant Officer, had the misfortune to meet with a painful accident on Sunday evening. He was driving along Fourth street when the taps on the two front wheels of his buggy came off, letting the bed of the buggy down on to the ground and throwing Mr. Jones out of the vehicle. The horse began plunging and kicking and in the mixup Mr. Jones was kicked on the thigh and painfully though not seriously hurt.

THE CATFISH ZONE.

And the Origin of the Philadelphia Habit of Catfish and Waffles.

While pessimists have been denouncing the extension of the pie belt through the United States and the enlargement of the salubrious biscuit district, they have been entirely oblivious of the extraordinary development of the catfish zone. This mischievous dweller of the pool is known to the small boy and the rustic angler under many names—in one place as a sucker, in another a bullhead, in a third a wolf fish, and most outrageous of all, in northern Mississippi as a shad. But its own only genuine title is catfish. The name is derived from the fact that when the creature is raised from the water it emits a grunting protest which poetical fishermen have pronounced like the purring of a family cat.

Philadelphia produced the catfish habit. For two centuries the animal was looked at as something which might be eaten to prevent starvation until one fine day a thrifty Quaker found that the catfish would eat boiled cornmeal and that this simple food not only fattened the eater, but changed the color of its belly from white to yellow. He perceived the pecuniary value of the discovery and established a catfish farm in which he fattened the fishes which he caught elsewhere and in due season sold them to the Philadelphia markets.

A Quakeress soon after that discovered that the old fashioned waffle, slightly salted and covered with melted butter, made an irresistible accessory to the fish when well fried. This started the catfish and waffles, for which the City of Brotherly Love has ever since been famous. The habit spread like an epidemic, and, like the star of empire, its way was westward. So far as is known the United States government has no record of catfish and waffles east of the Delaware river, but starting at Philadelphia a distinct catfish zone runs westward, terminating at Denver, reaching as far north as Minneapolis and St. Paul and as far south as Mobile and New Orleans. The catfish is said to possess medicinal virtue. It is mildly anesthetic, soporific and antispasmodic.—New York Post.

If You Have to Fight a Boa.

If any reader of this article should ever be so unfortunate as to experience the embrace of a boa constrictor, it is recommended that he try to release himself by taking hold of the creature's tail and unwinding it from that end. It can be easily unwound in that way, but otherwise it is not possible. The way to kill a snake is not to attempt to crush its head, the bones of which are very hard, but to strike the tail, where the spinal cord is but thinly covered by bone and suffers readily from injury. It is the same with an eel. Hit the tail two or three times against any hard substance, and the eel quickly dies.

The boas are not venomous, but their fangs are sufficiently powerful to inflict serious wounds.

One of Rhodes' Ideas.

A well known peer once asked Cecil Rhodes to stand godfather to his son, and he replied that he would on one condition, which was that he might invest at once $100 in the boy's name and give $100 on each succeeding birthday, provided that it should all go on at compound interest until the boy was old enough to begin to spend the interest, and that then he might yearly decide on what to spend it, so long as it was not on himself. "This," said Mr. Rhodes, "will do two things—first, it will teach your boy how to spend money, and, secondly, it will make him unselfish and kind to those in need."—Court Journal.

And Vermillion Was Taken to Columbus, where He Must Answer to Charge of Desertion.

John Vermillion, aged about 22 or 23 years, was arrested by Officers Kennedy and Zergiebel at the home of his half brother, Jonas Good, in the Welsh Hills, and was returned to the Columbus barracks Saturday by Officer Kennedy, as a deserter.

Vermillion enlisted in the U. S. army June 21st last, with Wm. Lugenbeal, also of this county, and they were sent from Columbus to Troop F, 15th Cavalry of Fort Keough, Montana, from which place they deserted about eight months ago.

They both returned to Licking county, and Lugenbeal was captured and returned last winter, but Vermillion eluded pursuit until Friday night, when the officers arrested him.

Mose Henthorne was arrested for drunkenness by Officer Zergiebel.

Lew Seaton was arrested by Marshal Vogelmeier, for being drunk.

Ed. Payne, a negro living in "Okla-homa" was arrested for carrying concealed weapons and threatening to shoot Hancock Frazer.

Dr. Williams' Burial.

The funeral of Dr. David Williams whose death was announced in Saturday's Advocate, took place Monday morning at his late home, corner Long and Jefferson avenue, Columbus. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Dr. Gladen and Rev. E. J. Converse of the First Congregational church. Burial was made at 2 p. m. at Alexandria, this county, where the doctor practiced medicine for 17 years. Dr. Williams was a member of the Congregational church for 30 years. He was also a member of St. Albans lodge F. and A. M., and was a comrade of Wells Post, G. A. R.

The doctor was married at Newark in 1867 to Miss Anna Nichols. Mrs. Williams died in 1888. Two children survive these parents, Dr. Fred O. Williams, who had been associated with his father in the practice of medicine, and Mrs. H. B. Hutchison. In 1900 Dr. Williams was married to Miss Jenny Evans.

Quotation Marks.

Speaking of the use of quotation marks, the London Chronicle says:

But why all these inverted commas, "the silly trick of peppering pages with these uncouth bacilli?" You will find none of these bacilli in the Bible. Take this passage, chosen at random:

Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again, a little while, and ye shall see me?

The modern compositor would set that passage between two brackets of inverted commas, for it is a quote within a quote. But it is beautifully clear as it stands, and among all Biblical misunderstandings no one, we think, has been misled by the absence of an inverted comma.

RESTLESS ANTILLES.

Menacing Crescent of Volcanic Islands in the Caribbees.

Scientific Study of the Formation of Martinique and St. Vincent—The Force That Formed the Islands Caused the Ruin of St. Pierre.

[Special Correspondence.]
Fort-de-France, Martinique, May 19.
—Now that something of the debris and wreckage caused by the eruption of Mont Pelee has been cleared away and the work of relieving the distress of the survivors has been well begun attention is directed toward the scientific study of the volcanic formation composing the menacing crescent of the Lesser Antilles, of which Martinique is the zenith. It is, however, yet too early to make thorough investigations on this island, as it will take a long time, perhaps many months, before the molten lava and superheated rock thrown from the crater are sufficiently cooled, though there is already here a scientific expedition from Washington to begin an inquiry. The party which came with the United States relief expedition on the auxiliary cruiser Dixie consists of Professor Robert T. Hill of the geological survey, C. E. Borckgreink, the antarctic explorer; Professor I. C. Russell, head of the geological department of the University of Michigan, and others. They are commissioned to investigate the effect on land or sea of the recent eruption of Mont Pelee, with its attendant seismic and other phenomena in the West Indian islands. They are not limited as to time and will stay in the islands as long as in their judgment the results desired may be obtained.

Just what caused Mont Pelee to "blow off her cap" and just what were the phenomena accompanying it are still mysteries which the sullen mountain refuses to divulge. That the convulsion was both volcanic and seismic is undoubted. The generally accepted theory as to the cause of volcanic eruptions is the access of water to masses of molten material in the earth. By contact the water is changed to steam, and the expansive force of the steam causes the explosion. It is supposed that the water works in from the surface of the earth slowly to the reservoirs of molten matter, and thus it takes a long time for a sufficient accumulation of the water to produce the explosion. This doubtless caused Mont Pelee's terrific outburst, though there seem to have been connected with it some phenomena not usually attending volcanic eruptions. Ponderous masses of the top and sides of the mountain were blown off by the immense pressure from below, scattering the debris great distances. With the explosion apparently came a flood of sulphurous gas, a cyclone of flame and a sea of lava and rock.

Martinique's volcanic earthquake record up to the last destructive outburst was in brief as follows: In 1727 there was what a historian describes as a "dreadful earthquake lasting hours," but he does not state the loss of life, if there was any. In 1767, however, an earthquake is briefly recorded that resulted in the loss of 10,000 human lives. In 1772 there was another earthquake that destroyed the island's fortifications. In 1851 the big volcano terrorized the island by belching forth huge volumes of smoke and ashes, accompanied by the most threatening roars and rumblings. The town of St. Pierre and the surrounding country were covered with a layer of ashes. Since then the mountain has uttered more or less alarming mutterings, especially along about 1870, but the late eruption has been the most disastrous of all.

Mont Pelee, whose height has been variously put at from 4,400 to 5,200 feet, had several dead craters, which formed the basins of small lakes. One of these lakes was particularly beautiful. The water was perfectly clear. At the bottom there was a shallow layer of mud of a yellowish color. This mud rested on a mass of pumice stone, mixed in places with ferruginous sand. The mud itself was a detritus of pumice stone. The average depth of the water was about four feet. It was comparatively warm and had a fresh, dewy taste.

The terrific volcanic storm in which ages ago Mont Pelee was uplifted crumpled her summit and rent and fissured her sides and sent her foothills sprawling all over the northern end of the island. As seen from the sea the mountain seemed to dominate the whole island of Martinique, less perhaps by her enormous bulk than by the pyramid symmetry of her outlines. "The bald mountain" she was called, but never was adjective so misapplied, for La Pelee was fully clothed from the edge of the sea to the very summit in the most extravagant luxuriance of tropical vegetation.

Among all the islands of the Caribbees St. Vincent is unique in natural wonders. It is composed largely of a single peak rising from the ocean's bed, with no outlying islets. Volcanic hills cross the island from north to south, intersected by beautiful and fertile valleys.

St. Vincent is eighteen miles long and eleven miles wide, and it had until the present disaster a population of nearly 50,000 persons. It was discovered by Columbus in 1498. Great Britain obtained sovereignty over the island in 1783.

Historic among the volcanic eruptions on the Caribbee islands was that of the Soufriere ("sulphur pit") of St. Vincent in 1812. Earthquakes had for two years terrified dwellers on the South American coast and the West Indian islands. In March of that year an earthquake buried 10,000 souls at Caracas, spread ruin along the line of the Andes and ended in the outburst from the Soufriere which altered the appearance of the island and destroyed its eastern end.

The Soufriere is situated at the northern extremity of the island and is 4,048 feet high. It is the last of a mountain chain which was called Morne a Garou by the natives. Baron Humboldt states that it had thrown out flames in 1718.

Previous to the eruption of 1812, according to the historians, the appearance of the Soufriere was most interesting. The crater was half a mile in diameter and 500 feet in depth. In its center was a conical hill fringed with shrubs and vines. At its base were two small lakes, one sulphurous, the other pure and tasteless. From the fissures of the cone a thin white smoke exuded, occasionally tinged with a light blue flame.

Other islands of the crescent group have suffered more or less from volcanic eruptions and earthquakes, though not as seriously as have Martinique and St. Vincent by the recent convulsions. Point a Pitre, in Guadeloupe, was utterly wiped out in 1843, though the loss of life was not to be compared with that at St. Pierre.

It is a curious thought that the same volcanic force which gave these persons their island home was that which caused their destruction. Martinique and St. Vincent and indeed nearly if not quite all of these restless Antilles are of volcanic formation, and the theory is held that the entire chain is undergoing a change from island to continental structure, as is Japan, and that ultimately they will form one body instead of distinct islands. Until this process is completed, it is held, volcanic and seismic convulsions will continue with more or less frequency and with greater or less disastrous effects. If this be true, the outlook for the stability of Caribbean real estate is not encouraging.

The Lesser Antilles are in the very center of what is known as "the line of fire," running north and south through the western hemisphere. They are links in the volcanic chain which extends through Central and South America southward and to the north through the United States at the longitude of Nevada and Oregon up to Alaska. These volcanoes are in some cases probably subterraneously connected, and it is likely that the exploding volcanoes on Martinique and St. Vincent were so connected. Scientists may perhaps trace a connection between these eruptions and the recent activity of the volcano of Colima, in Costa Rica, which is now in eruption. A sympathetic relation of this kind has long been known between Hecla and Vesuvius, and there is scarcely any doubt among geologists that similar relations exist between the Carib volcanoes and those of Central America and southern Mexico.

COLLISION

THREW TWO LADIES OUT BADLY INJURING THEM.

Mrs. Stauch Had "Leg Broken," Mrs. Ritzer Had Ankle Sprained—Mr. Siler Escaped.

Sunday night about 8 o'clock, as Mr. Fritz Siler was driving north on North Third street, accompanied by Mrs. Barbara Ritzer and "Mrs. Stauch," he noticed two rigs coming south, the drivers urging their horses to great speed. In endeavoring to get out of the road of the racing horses he was run into by one of the rigs. Mr. Siler's rig was overturned and the occupants were thrown out on the ground with great force. Mrs. Stauch was badly injured her right leg being broken and one of her arms hurt, while Miss Ritzer sustained a sprained ankle. Mr. Siler escaped with a few bruises. Dr. Foster attended to the injuries of the ladies. The buggy was badly wrecked. The names of the parties who ran into his buggy could not be learned.

DAIRY NOTES.

Good butter should be solid from the time it is put upon the table. Any excitement in the dairy cow tends to lessen the flow of milk.

Failing to get all the buttermilk out causes butter to become rancid soon.

To obtain the best results in churning the cream should be only slightly sour. In winter the cream should be warmed up to about 66 degrees before putting in the churn.

One advantage in brine salting is that it almost entirely avoids streaked or mottled butter.

The milk should always be skimmed while sweet and the cream then allowed to turn slightly sour.

Sometimes butter has white specks distributed through it. This is caused by oversourness in the cream.

In butter making next to controlling the temperature is to churn often while the cream is in good condition.

With temperature under control and churning done at the right time the butter will become solid and be easily handled.

On the farm to make the most out of the milk and butter some of the cows should be bred to come fresh in the spring and some in the fall.—St. Louis Republic.

Recruiting Office.

There is very strong probability that the recruiting office at this station will be closed before very long. Sergeant Charles Gutjahr, who has been in charge of the station here says that while this has not been definitely decided upon, that it is his opinion that the office will soon be closed. The troops have been withdrawn from Cuba and very few are going to the Philippines at present, so that not many men are needed in the service, and those that are needed can be secured at the recruiting offices. Some enlistings is still being done for the coast artillery.

PROMPT ACTION IS IMPERATIVE

Time Lost at This Season Means Increased Suffering, Perhaps Death.

PAINE'S Celery Compound

Is the Never Failing Health Restorer in Springtime.

It is now an established fact that nervous prostration, insomnia, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, and blood diseases are curable, if Paine's Celery Compound is honestly and faithfully used at this season. It is well known that many of our most successful physicians are daily prescribing and recommending Paine's Celery Compound. This fact proves the superiority of the great medicine over all the regular drugs usually prescribed for the troubles mentioned above.

Paine's Celery Compound is pre-eminent adapted for correcting unhealthy nerve action. It feeds the nerve centers with elements needed to strengthen them and build up healthy tissue. It purifies the blood, taking away every trace of poison, and encourages a rapid growth of red corpuscles, upon which the vigor of the entire system depends.

Weariness, tired feelings, despondency, and unrest, so prevalent in the last days of spring, are banished after a week's use of Paine's Celery Compound, and full vital energy and strength take the place of lassitude and weakness.

Now is the time to strike at the root of your besetting troubles. The work of recuperation begun today will save you future weeks, perhaps months of torture and mental agony. The immense and unprecedented demand for Paine's Celery Compound—earth's best medicine—is an indication that the thousands are throwing off disease and seeking health. Past experience and the happy results given by Paine's Celery Compound, all combine to make clear your path of duty. Begin today with Paine's Celery Compound if you would establish health and vigor for the coming summer season.

THE SIZE OF FAIRIES.

Creatures Who Live in the Poetry of the Elizabethan Age.

Readers of Elizabethan poetry are familiar with fairies who fashion coats from a bat's wing, fans from those of butterflies, coverlets from the skins of snakes, wage war with spiders and make expeditions on the backs of flies. Writers have commonly assumed that such minuteness was the product of poetic fancy, which reduced these spirits to a size much below that admitted by popular belief, but this is an error. Folklore supplies us with abundant examples of fairies who can carry no more than a single straw, who emerge from a molehill and make a thread bridge in order to traverse a keyhole. Concordant is the testimony of language, as when the foxglove passes for being a fairy cap.

If a size so reduced cannot allow historical interpretation, still less does ethnology explain the qualities of these fays, who in power do not differ from their larger cousins. Queen Mab, no larger than the jewel of a ring, is yet charged with the functions of a birth goddess. The least fairy can steal a bride or a baby; tenuity is of less consequence, since any tiny sprite can at will assume gigantic proportions. The fairies who in one canton are represented as dwarfish in the next may be described as giants.

The contrast, which cannot be accounted for as arising from historical memories, may be easily explained by the early modes of conceiving nature. In prehistoric conception a mountain might pass for a large man, a river for a tall one, while the inmates of petty hillocks would naturally be imagined as possessing a form corresponding to the narrow limits of their habitats.—International Monthly.

Passing of Indispensables.

Only those who have to go to the depths of long disused trunks when moving time necessitates renovation and the sifting of belongings realize how much of what one clings to as indispensable becomes absolutely useless when laid by for a time. Pictures prized for one reason or another, souvenirs that fail to recall anything but inconvenience, letters that one couldn't bear to burn, odds and ends that one was sure to want, all become as trash in the repose of the stored trunk and are sacrificed without a qualm when moving time comes around to make room for other things that will last their little day and then find the same end.—New York Press.

The British government has ordered the immediate purchase of 13,000 horses in Hungary. They will be shipped from Fiume to South Africa.

Record Breaking Run Made on The Baltimore and Ohio—Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Dance Tuesday—Important Meeting Sunday—Local Notes of the Day.

Cumberland, Md., May 26—Baltimore & Ohio express No. 6, which arrived here 52 minutes late Saturday afternoon, made a record breaking run between here and Washington. The train, which was composed of five Pullman cars and drawn by engine 1310, was run by Engineer Oscar Peters, counted one of the best engineers on the road and who pulled his train into Washington only 10 minutes late. The 43 miles from Washington Junction to Washington were made in 42 minutes five minutes quicker than any other engine ever ran over that division, 11 miles of the distance being a steep grade, with many curves. On some parts of the route the train made 75 miles an hour.

New Round House. L. Ferguson & Son have been awarded the contract for building the new round house and general shops for the B. & O. railroad company at Fairmount, W. Va. The company it is understood will also erect duplicate shops at Keyser, Md., and Connelville, Pa.

REMEMBERED

Is Mr. Vadakin by His Old Associates in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Service.

Ever since the resignation of Mr. Charles Vadakin, Division Engineer of the B. & O. went into effect, the boys in the Maintenance of Way department have been taking steps to demonstrate the appreciation and esteem they feel for him. Saturday night fourteen of his old associates met and delegated Mr. J. S. Price of the Engineer's office to pave the way for their coming. Mr. Price repaired to Mr. Vadakin's home for the purpose of spending the evening, and at 7:30 the remainder of the crowd arrived in a body, giving Mr. Vadakin the biggest surprise of his life.

After an hour or more had been spent in social conversation, Mr. Vadakin was invited out into the dining room, where Mr. Price, on behalf of the employees of the Maintenance of Way department, presented him with two handsome leather chairs, a gold-headed cane and a silver service. Mr. Vadakin was so surprised at this token of friendship that for a short time he was unable to respond, but he finally managed to return his thanks most feelingly, after which an hour or two was spent in having a good social time, when all took their departure, after extending their best wishes to Mr. Vadakin.

HASLET APPOINTED.

Mayor Ferry has in the face of the unanimous opposition of the Council, Republicans as well as Democrats, appointed Flavius Haslet as city policeman. This is the man who now has a suit for something like $300 against the city for services while acting as special policeman during the administration of the late Mayor Barrows.

There must be some reason for the unanimous opposition on the part of the council to the appointment of Mr. Haslet but the Mayor has appointed him just the same. He takes the place of Hiram Jacobs, resigned.

people of Findlay will provide free lodging and breakfast to delegates and dinners and suppers will be procured at restaurants for 25 cents. Last year Licking county had only two delegates to the state convention. This year it is hoped that there will be at credentials immediately.

Seventh Century Needlework.

Before the end of the seventh century needlework was carried to great perfection in convents, where it was used for the embellishment of the church and the decoration of priestly robes.
Artists did not think it beneath their dignity to trace the patterns used for embroidery in their natural colors. A certain religious lady, wishing to ask brother a sacerdotal vestment, came no less a personage than St. Dunstan, then a young man, but already noted for his artistic skill and taste, to draw the flowers and figures which she afterward worked in gold thread.

Simple Words.

There are a certain number of simple words in the English language that will express the greatest thoughts, and great men use them. To be incomprehensible may be a sign of knowledge.
It may also be the sign of an intellectual snob. The world is not moved by men and women who talk in an unknown tongue.—Schoolmaster.

MEMORIAL

SERVICES SUNDAY AT THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

And in the Auditorium by G. A. R. and
U. V. L.—two interesting Programs.

The memorial services under the auspices of Lemert Post, G. A. R. were held in the First Presbyterian Church
Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

There was a large audience present including the soldiers' organizations, which included Lemert Post commanded by D. J. Jones, Company G,
14th regiment, O. N. G., Captain Cary
Crawford commanding; the Spanish
American War Veterans and the Women's Relief Corps.

The church was beautifully decorated in good taste with American flags, and the song service was appropriate to the occasion.

The choir sang two anthems, "Onward Christian Soldiers," arranged by
I. V. Flagler, and "Rest Soldier Rest," by Emerson, while D. C. Crider sang as a solo, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

The ritual services appropriate to the day were conducted by Post Commander D. J. Jones after which the sermon was preached by Rev. L. S.
Boyce from II. Timothy, seventh chapter and third verse.

The theme was "A Good Soldier, His Qualifications," which latter in the sum should produce a man after the model of Jesus Christ. These qualities should embrace soundness of body and mind, loyalty, courage and a yielding to discipline. After life's battles for the true man and courageous warrior, came the Soldier's Rest, in that happy place where the sound of clanging arms, the clarion note of the bugle, and the clash of battle, will never be heard.

The service was helpful and very impressive.

At three o'clock at the Memorial Hall the Union Veteran Legion, held their services in honor of the three members who had gone to answer the last roll call.

The chairs of these three comrades were draped and decorated with beautiful flowers.

The memorial address was delivered by Rev. George W. Van Fossen, rector of Trinity Episcopal church,
and was a loving tribute to the soldier dead, and an inspiration to those who are still on this side of the chill river of death.

Captain F. G. Warden sang in very good voice, a beautiful sacred solo,
"Lead Kindly Light," by Pinsutti and Mrs. C. W. Miller rendered in her usual impressive style and with excellent taste, "He Leadeth Me," by Karl Goetze, Miss Pearl Bournier playing both accompaniments with marked skill.

A Story of Browning.

Browning himself couldn't always explain his meaning at first reading. Dr.
Furnivall, founder of the English Browning society, frequently consulted the poet as to the meaning of some passage in his works. "Bless me," Browning would say, "I really have forgotten what I did mean, and as I haven't got a copy of my works by me I really can't enlighten you. Just lend me the book, there's a good fellow. I'll look it over at my leisure and try to find out what was in my mind at the time."

all portraits finished, the artist will be
